HOTEL RISTORANTE MARGHINE

TO KNOW BOLOTANA TOWN

The municipality of Bolotana born in the geographical Marghine and occupies the central western area of Sardinia. The natural environment has a varied climate, fauna, botany and landscape very interesting and diverse depending on the area that you cross.

The municipality of Bolotana is located in a hilly area that stretches between the Marghine mountain range and the right bank of the river Tirso. The territory is rich in archaeological sites and artifacts that testify the presence of man since prehistoric times. Among the natural beauty it is particularly reminiscent of the rich flora and fauna of "Badde Salighes", planted by Benjamin Piercy.

The mountain overlooking the town is full of beautiful forests (see Badde Salighes-Ortakis- Mularza Noa) as well as many important springs that feed the river Temo and Coghinas but also the river Tirso.

The study area is rich in archaeological pre-Nuraghic, Nuraghic and Punic and Roman. A special note to the historical center of medieval origin with narrow and irregular streets. Among the many bolotanesi traditions, little known to the media,

handed down through the centuries without interruption, stand out the rites of Holy Week.

The cityscape is characterized by the presence in its historical center of a medieval architectural layout, with narrow streets and irregular that cut in every sense of the various blocks. The presence of frequent scenes help to increase this intricate and chaotic tangle of a typical living concept of a rural and pastoral culture with a rationality edificatoria different from the post-industrial rationality.

TO BE SEEN

The most famous source of Bolotana attraction is undoubtedly the beautiful villa Piercy, charming Art Nouveau villa, built in the past campaigns in the last decades of the nineteenth century by engineer Benjamin Piercy, where the project of the Sardinian railways had been entrusted. Around the villa its owner had planted a real lush garden of exotic species, the engineer brought with him from his travels around the world.

Villa Piercy

The villa, in English colonial style, consists of a rectangular body with circular towers at the corners and inside was characterized by fixed furniture and fine finishes.

The two-story building, scores range from a smooth, flat, rectangular quatrefoil, stone plastered, only vaguely inspired by a medieval castle because of the four towers with slit windows, topped by a domed roof onto which pinnacolini iron. The rest of the building's footprint is more rustic simplicity of a British cottage, where the echo of the verses of William Mason, cited by Kenneth Clark (1928) resonates in the invitation to build farms in the form of castles, " with round towers that will provide a safe haven for birds and their young featherless ". On the main entrance stands a coat of arms with a rampant lion, a tribute of the former owner to his native Welsh.

In 2007 they were completed the restoration work included in its project to develop both the forest and the garden is the architectural heritage of historical value represented by the villa and contemporary agricultural village.

Complex Tittiriola

The monument is located on the edge of a plateau overlooking the valley where flows the Rio Bardosu in Marghine region of central-northern Sardinia.

The dolmen, towered, keeps intact the room, extended by three niches and preceded by an entrance corridor on which open the ladder and a niche. The entrance, rectangular and oriented SE, is surmounted by an architrave with overhanging exhaust window. It introduces in the passage that widens and rises gradually to the point where they face the openings of the ladder and a niche, then narrowed in the direction of the room. It was reported the existence of a sacred well, held recently, and a giant tomb, not far from nuraghe.

TO TASTE

Bread, secular tradition, refined and full of specialties which is reflected in the large production of grain that, in the recent past, meant that Bolotana was considered the breadbasket of the province of Nuoro. Traditional feeding Bolotanese, the bread was the main staple food: the housewife fact he had learned to confezionarne numerous varieties.

In every house there was a wood stove and a "unu frundagu" room where they were placed, both the supply of grain, that all tools that were used to make bread.

Once the role of the bread was basic and irreplaceable in the diet of all: rich and poor. No one could deprive varied only the quantity and quality, depending on the economic and social conditions and time of year.

For those who worked in the country a full meal could consist of a "cutter" whole with cheese, sausage, bacon, bacon, olives, onion, fresh or dried ricotta, fresh or dried fruit, of course, always according to what offered the season.

He did not know the waste. It was an old custom never to throw the bread, and not only for a sacred character motivation, but mainly because being a poor kitchen, a possible famine would have a detrimental effect.

Despite the social and economic changes in most families women still use baking bread as before, with the same skill and rituals that the grandmothers and mothers have taught them.
